Knowledge Base

Memory Foam Mattress also known as Swedish mattress or visco-elastic foam mattress, originates from the NASA space program, first invented memory foam in 1966, now is the most popular mattress type on the market! This kind of mattresses has features that can memorize your body contours and follow the heat of your body to give exceptional support. A memory foam mattress is designed to distribute body weight evenly and then return to its natural shape once you have moved. Nowadays, many of the famous brands import their memory foams from China Mattress Manufacturers to cut the cost of the mattress and increase the bottom line for their shareholders.

Pocket spring mattress was the most popular mattress technology before the advent of memory foam, but now the spring mattresses have often been put into shade by other technologies. Pocket spring mattresses always with high quality, they have a springing system that includes separate small springs placed in pockets of fabrics. Hence they are able to control weight properly, the multiple springs are what lends to the mattress giving a greater amount of flexibility. Pocket springs comply with the body's shape helping to maintain natural spinal alignment and distribute body pressure, this mattress serves as an adjusting cushion allowing you to rest and feel better when you awake.

Latex Mattress is produced from tapping the Hevea tree, nowadays, less costly latex foam mattress may be constructed possibly of synthetic latex or more often a combination of natural and synthetic latex, it maybe just the best mattress around. The latex mattresses are made with little holes within the core; this makes the mattress more pliable, very supportive and comfortable. They are also hypoallergenic which makes them ideal for people with allergies. Also they can keep you cooler in summer and warmer in winter. The best latex foam mattress pad will abate areas of high pressure and confer perfect position of the back, making a much more soothing night's sleep.
